Frequently Asked Questions

When should I use bike share vs. bike rental?

Bike share is ideal for short, one-way rides (getting from Point A to Point B) since you can take a bike out from any station and return it to any other in the network. You can also use it to take a longer ride – your first 30 minutes are included with a Day Pass and each additional...

How do I take out a bike?

First, you need to become an Annual Member or buy a Day Pass to be able to use Citi Bike. Then, find available bikes on the Station Map or mobile app. Once you've successfully inserted your member bike key or entered a ride code, the light on the dock will...

Do I need bike share if I own my own bike?

Bike share can still be very useful even if you own your own bike. It's ideal for one-way trips, when you wouldn't be able to ride your own bike back home. It also saves the hassle of having to carry around a bike lock and find a place to lock your bike, and you never have...

How can I make sure my bike was docked correctly?

To return a bike, line up the triangle at the front of the bike with the dock. When you insert your bike into the dock, the light on the dock will first show yellow. If it turns to green, it means you've docked the bike correctly and ended your ride. If the light turns...
